Wells Cathedral. The whole of the glorious West Front of Wells Cathedral, except the upper towers, is chiefly due to Joceline, Bishop of Bath and Wells (1205-1241), and is one of the finest specimens of Mediæval sculpture in Europe. There are two chantry chapels (1424 and 1480) and Ina, King of the West Saxons, is said to be buried in the Nave here. The central tower is 182 feet high, the western towers 130 feet each.
